

discipleship essentials

Essentials for Spiritual Leadership Study Guide

LEADING SMALL GROUPS

LESSON 1: DYNAMICS OF GROUP DISCUSSION

INTRODUCTION

This lesson is part of a Discipleship Essentials module titled Leading Small Groups. The purpose of these lessons is to equip the developing leader with skills and understanding in order to successfully lead a small group. A small group may be a Bible Study or Discipleship group, or any other small group used for discipleship and ministry. The focus is on building strong communication skills and positive relationships, accompanied by an attitude of love and service. Equipping yourself to be a better small group leader will enhance your ability to disciple and teach others, and at the same time, create a more enjoyable experience for everyone. This module is designed for those who are currently in church leadership, small group leadership, or a member of a small group. Hopefully members of a small group will one day take on leadership responsibility of such a group.

The Study Guide is intended for an individual to look deeper into a specific lesson on their own. The lessons can be used in conjunction with other Discipleship Essentials materials, such as the video and audio productions found on www.discipleshipessentials.org.

Scripture quotations are from The Holy Bible, English Standard Version® (ESV®), copyright © 2001 by Crossway, a publishing ministry of Good News Publishers. Used by permission. All rights reserved.

All other content is © 2019 Trans World Radio Canada, and may be used in any way you like as long as you use it with the purpose of reaching the world for Christ and do not charge for the use of the material. See more license details at www.discipleshipessentials.org/licensing.

LEADING SMALL GROUPS

LESSON 1: DYNAMICS OF GROUP DISCUSSION

WHAT IS IT ABOUT?

This lesson explores the principles of leading a group discussion, how to prepare for a group discussion, and how to ask questions to stimulate discussion.

JUST SO YOU KNOW...

Have you had the experience of reading pages of a book, only to forget everything you just read? Or to be asked what a pastor spoke on last Sunday only to remember it vaguely? This is because we don't retain information from passive learning very well. On the other hand, you probably remember quite well the topic of the last discussion you had! Discussion is a very helpful method of teaching and exploring ideas. As we engage with others, discussion helps us clarify our own thoughts, see connections we never saw before, and learn from our peers. Successful group discussion comes down to preparation – which is where this lesson can help. See how using the tips in this lesson will improve your group's conversation!

GETTING STARTED

1. What can you learn from having a group discussion about a passage of the Bible that you cannot learn from just listening to a sermon or radio broadcast?

2. What are some factors that can make group discussion difficult?

STUDY

❖ THE PURPOSE OF SMALL GROUPS: Many churches and ministries encourage believers to meet together in small groups for regular Bible Study and prayer, in addition to meeting together as a larger assembly on Sunday. In various settings these might be study groups, discipleship groups, new believer classes, or meeting together for some other purpose. Small groups are built on a certain amount of discussion, while classes and sermons are the best environment for lecturing and passing on large amounts of information. Small groups offer the opportunity to ask questions, discuss and clarify ideas, engage in critical thinking, and share ministry experiences. Each participant is actively involved rather than being a passive listener in a church service.

- From your experience or from what you can guess, what are the benefits of meeting with other Christians in a small group?

- How is a leader of a small group different from a teacher in a classroom? How are they similar?

- Facilitation: The role of a leader in a small group is different than a teacher in a classroom. While the leader might have done more homework on a topic than the others, he or she does not necessarily have the most knowledge in the room. Their role is to facilitate – or to help the group in meeting its objectives.
 - A Facilitator helps the group to establish goals and clarifies expectations.
 - A Facilitator does not exert control and power, but is more concerned with group participation and success.
 - A Facilitator develops a safe learning environment that protects minority views, draws on the experiences of the participants, referees disagreements, and helps the group to see connections between multiple viewpoints.
 - A Facilitator uses questions to encourage thinking, draw implications, and promote conclusions.

❖ DYNAMICS OF GROUP DISCUSSION: The quality of a small group is directly related to the quality of discussions they are able to have. Leading effective discussions takes preparation, practice, and keen observation of your participants. Discussions (by their nature) are unpredictable. If you have a specific outcome in mind, you may be quickly frustrated! While questions can help engage the learners with your lesson, new information should be welcomed and explored. Otherwise, the learning process will be stifled and they will not know how to apply these new truths.

- Excellent group discussion requires the following:
 - Safety: Individuals should feel free to disagree, but do so politely. We must allow for people to not feel belittled or threatened by others who hold different views. There should be safety for people to be honest in their responses.
 - Structure: One person should be appointed to lead the discussion. They may pose the initial questions, as well as follow up when people give answers. They should have the authority to stop the discussion if it goes on too long or begins to get heated, and move on to the next item on the agenda.
 - Purpose: A time of discussion should have an end result in mind – either allowing people to share their personal experiences, to share what they see in the passage of the Bible, or to answer some application questions from a lesson. Keep the purpose clear when allowing time for discussion.

❖ ASKING THE RIGHT QUESTIONS: Putting a topic before a group of people will not naturally lead to fruitful discussion. This is where asking the right questions is so important! The right questions will allow your group members to discover the truths in the Bible for themselves, and make their own applications.

- Examine the chart to see the three types of questions we can ask a group:

Types of Questions	How it is Used	Example
Closed	No discussion follows -only one correct answer (sometimes yes or no) -useful to see if participants understand you, or to start a topic	-How old are you? -What does 2 Timothy 2:2 tell us is the one thing we should do? - What is the great commandment that Jesus gives us in Matthew 28:19?
Partially Open	Little discussion follows - answers don't require much thought or synthesis of information - may be multiple answers but the answer doesn't lead to further questions - answers may be right or wrong	-Where did you go today? - What are some of your daily habits? -Who were some of the people disciplined by the Apostle Paul?
Open	Excellent for discussion - there is no right or wrong answer -- each person may have a different response, and that's okay - questions may include personal experience, opinion and implication	-Why do you think the Apostle Paul disciplined so many people? -How does this passage make you feel? -What are some of the struggles you face at home? - How can you apply this truth to your life?

- Open Questions: These questions are ideal for generating discussion. Generally, these are used after the facts of the passage or topic you are studying are established. There are several types of open questions, and they can be used in different situations:
 - Personal – this may be about past, present or future. The question may address personal history, attitudes or habits. “When do you feel most worshipful?”
 - Observation – looks at what stands out to them in the text being studied, or what a passage says. For example, “What are some of the sins listed in this passage that are difficult to overcome?”
 - Interpretation – asks what it means in the context, or why it is there. For example, “Why did Paul write to the church in Corinth?”
 - Application – asks what I should do about this. “How should this passage change the way a person lives?”
 - Extension – these questions can be used to extend conversation in a particular direction. Questions could include the following: “Can you tell why you think that?” “What are the implications of that idea?” “If that is true, what should change about our behaviour?” “How does that make you feel?”

- Read each of the passages below. Then consider what types of questions you could ask a small group about these verses. Write down at least one closed question and at least three open questions for each passage.

	Mark 4:35-41	Genesis 1	Romans 12
Closed Questions
Open Questions

❖ THE RIGHT ENVIRONMENT: In order to be very successful as a discussion leader, you will have to create the right environment for discussion to happen. You may have a group that makes discussion easy because they are all comfortable sharing their opinions – but that is an unusual situation!

- Mistakes the Leader should Avoid: As a discussion leader we must be careful not to make the following mistakes:
 - Asking too Many Questions: When we offer three or four questions at once about a topic, no one knows which one to answer. Ask one question at a time.
 - Not Leaving Time: Some discussion leaders will ask a question, then pause briefly before answering it themselves. Some people will need time to think over a question.
 - Ignoring or Belittling Answers: When you mock answers or are frustrated when people do not provide the answer you are looking for, they may be hesitant to give answers in the future. Be positive and encouraging!
 - Talking instead of Listening: Discussion leaders should allow the group to interact with each other as they come up with answers. They can learn from one another rather than hearing only what you have to say.
 - Disregarding the Conclusions of the Group: When summarizing a group discussion, the leader must always encourage the group itself to share their own conclusions based on what they have learned from one another.

➤ When have you experienced some of the above mistakes? Have you made some of them yourself? What was the situation and the result?

- Mistakes Made by the Participants: Sometimes a discussion doesn't go well because of the participants involved. In order to maintain healthy discussion, you need to help participants who:
 - Monopolize the Conversation: Some people really love to talk and be heard. Discussion groups are not the place to listen to one person only! Suggest that someone else speaks, and if someone needs extra attention, suggest that the two of you meet at another time.
 - Are Reluctant to Participate: Some people will never share personal information and are reluctant to answer. Sometimes it takes time and gentle encouragement. Each member of a discussion group should participate.

- o Are Argumentative: Some people will argue with any opinion that differs from their own. They will need to be gently and lovingly corrected. Remind the group that this is not productive, nor is it loving behaviour.
 - o Veering off Track: Sometimes people will veer off on a tangent and begin talking about a new topic. A discussion leader must decide if this is fruitful or not, and if necessary, gently remind the group of their purpose and topic at hand.
- What can you do at the beginning of a discussion to help participants avoid the mistakes listed here?

❖ CONCLUSION: There are many benefits of facilitating discussion time in group ministry settings, but because people are involved, there are challenges as well. Properly managed, a time of group discussion can be fruitful and enlightening.

IN SUMMARY

- ❖ The purpose of small groups is to allow for fellowship and discipleship; they are built on discussion and the study of God’s Word.
- ❖ The role of a leader in a small group is different than a teacher in a classroom. A small group leader must facilitate by establishing goals and allowing the group to meet them.
- ❖ The quality of a small group is directly related to the quality of discussions within the group. The environment should promote safety, structure and purpose.
- ❖ In discussions, closed questions can begin a topic, but open questions are needed to move discussion along and be productive.
- ❖ Creating the right environment is important for discussions, and preparation will go a long way to producing ideal small groups.

REFLECTION QUESTIONS

1. What are the benefits of a discussion in a small group setting? What can be learned in discussion that cannot be learned by a different method?

2. What types of small groups can make use of discussion time? When is a discussion group not appropriate?

3. When in a small group, do you tend towards monopolizing the conversation, keeping your opinions to yourself, being argumentative, or going off on tangents? How can you work on this?